Meeting with Ex Libris

The steering committee met with Ex Libris management representatives in March to discuss specific Israeli issues. Representatives of the Primo, SFX and Aleph/API national workgroups joined the discussion:

Ex Libris presented the outlines of the "early adopters" project in Israel, planned timelines for implementation and later migration to the Alma environment.

MELI presented the growing interest in joining Alma adoption and implementation among the various Israeli users, not only the institutions in the "early adopters" program. MELI suggested to organize Alma training days based on the Alma Academy learning sessions for those institutions.

MELI asked to discuss the procedures for Israeli development requests – specifically to transfer MELI development points for Aleph to use in future Alma development requests.

Ex Libris suggested to raise this topic again in the beginning of 2018, after most of the early adopters in Israel will have migrated to the new system.

Ex Libris product support was also one of the topics in the meeting – Aleph and Digitool support teams in Israel, various problems with Primo and Primo Central systems (some of them unique for Israeli users), the Documentation Center and the Support Articles in the Salesforce system and the need for more transparency of information regarding the cases in enhancement or in development.

The SFX user group reported several problems with the Hebrew titles in the KB.

The new Aleph/API working group was presented.

Training Days

MELI organizes 3-4 conferences or training days a year, each hosted by a different member institution.

This year's first conference took place in March 2015 and was called "Evolution or Revolution: RDA, Linked Data and more"

The second, in June 2015, was a Primo Day, organized with the local Primo working group.

The third day – SFX hands-on session - is planned for the end of October.

Technical Seminar

MELI in cooperation with Ex Libris organizes a two-day technical seminar biennially. Last year's seminar took place at the end of November 2014.

- Continue with the ongoing user group activities: representing our users' needs in meetings with Ex Libris, supporting the collaboration between our member institutes and the company, and providing options for professional conferences and seminars.
- Re-assessment of MELI annual membership fee.
