Testing Script:

- The More “native” the experience the better results
- Don’t script in directions
  - Don’t say “Click the submit button”
  - “Submit the Form” is better but not best
  - “sign up for …” is best
First Task:

Is there a topic that you are researching, or would like to research, that this product might aid in?

Please do a little research about this topic. Again be sure to think out loud about the steps you are going through. Remember that we are testing the interface and not you nor the topic that you are searching.

This is a list of suggested topics sent with the recruit letter.
- Deseret Alphabet
- World War II
- Martin Handcart company
- John Tanner
- John Rowe Moyle
- Your Family History
- Presidents of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints
- Interactions between the LDS Presidents and US Presidents
- LDS leadership involvement in Government
- LDS in Italy (or any other country)

Questions:

How is the user narrowing down searches?
Is the user using pre-search facets?
Is the user just searching over and over?
Did the user login?
Does the user notice the e-shelf?
How is the user scanning the info?

Second Task:

If the user didn't use the e-shelf before:

With your last search, identify four of the most useful items. You can't spend anymore time researching today, but want to remember what these books are and want to come back to them later.

If the user used the e-shelf in the first task have them navigate there, if not have them login.

Sign into the system as ____, with this password ____. Here is the catalog e-shelf. It is a place to save your searches and books to look at later. You are getting a little too many books and can't find things very easily.

Organize your e-shelf.

As they are organizing the e-shelf, notice an item that they have in there, if they are using the canned e-shelf have them use Nauvoo Temple.

You saved an item about the __________. Locate the item and view the information about it.

Questions
How did they organize the shelf?
Did they create folders?
Did they Drag and Drop?
Did they find the item information after they clicked on it?
What were the key frustration points?

The control which designers know in the print medium, and often desire in the web medium, is simply a function of the limitation of the printed page. We should embrace the fact that the web doesn’t have the same constraints, and design for this flexibility. But first, we must “accept the ebb and flow of things.”
