Lean Library is a powerful tool that seamlessly delivers library resources, services, and branding into the patrons’ workflows, wherever they are. Created by librarians for librarians, our browser plug-in extends your services to solve access issues and provide users with content as and when they need it, all while protecting their privacy.
NOW SERIOUSLY, WHAT DO YOU DO?

We help you ensure that:

* your digital library resources are where your patrons are
* your patrons have access to the content you have licensed
* you can guide your users to the “right” access location
* you can provide your patrons with guidance when they need it
* and more...
HOW DO YOU DO IT?
HOW DID IT GET STARTED

Johan Tilstra founded Lean Library based on:

1. Changing trends on how users access library resources
2. He was part of a project, that did away with the local discovery system
3. Overwhelmingly positive feedback from end-users

Migrant Female Domestic Workers: Debating the Economic, Social and Political Impacts in Singapore

Brenda S.A. Yeo, Shilena Huang, Joaquin Gonzalez, III

First Published March 1, 1999 | Research Article

Abstract
As a small labor-short city-state with over 100,000 migrant domestic workers mainly from the Philippines, Indonesia, and Sri Lanka and amounting to one foreign maid to every eight households, Singapore provides a case study of a country where foreign maids are seen as an economic necessity but not without important social consequences and political ramifications. Beginning with a brief examination of state policy on transnational labor migration relating to female domestic workers, this article goes on to explore the debates within public discourse as well as private accounts on the impact of foreign maids on a range of issues, including female participation in the workforce; the social reproduction of everyday life including the delegation of the domestic burden and the upbringing of the young; the presence of "enclaves" of foreign nationals in public space; and bilateral relations between host and sending countries. It concludes that the transnational labor migration is a multifaceted phenomenon with important repercussions on all spheres of life, hence requiring dynamic policy intervention on the part of the authorities concerned.

Cardiac alterations in cancer

Abstract

Cachexia is a condition characterized by a loss of lean body mass and muscle function, commonly associated with cancer patients. The impact of cachexia on heart function and structure is not well characterized. The objective of this study was to investigate the effects of cancer cachexia on the heart using echocardiography and histology. Cachexia was induced in mice by an intraperitoneal injection of poly-adenosine 2'-5'-oligoadenylate (P-2A-5A). The mice were monitored for 14 days and the echocardiography data was collected on the last day of the study. The results showed that the heart function was significantly impaired in the cachexia group compared to the control group. The histological examination revealed a significant decrease in the heart weight-to-body weight ratio in the cachexia group. These findings suggest that cachexia negatively affects heart function and structure, which may contribute to the cardiovascular complications observed in cancer patients.

"BASIC" INTEGRATION

1. Lean Library loads a KBART file (up to) daily
2. When we come across a DOI / ISBN, we’ll query the KBART File
3. Construct a link to the Link Resolver to handle the rest

There is only a single truth to maintain and that is the Link Resolver of your institutions.
Lean Library integrates with:

1. ALMA
2. SFX
3. 360Link
4. Summon

We utilize the API / XML-View of these systems to ensure we have an up to date view of what is available and the correct links to display to the users.

We also support OCLC, TDNet & EBSCO
