Royal Danish Library

In 2017, the State and University Library in Aarhus and The Royal Library in Copenhagen merged.

The Danish National Art Library and the Administrative Library were also part of the merger.

The merger was a result of political aim of consolidating national and university libraries in Denmark

Larsen, Svend. (2020) 'Mergers and digital transformation in Danish research libraries', ABI-Technik. Berlin: De Gruyter. Available at: <https://doi.org/10.1515/abitech-2020-2032>

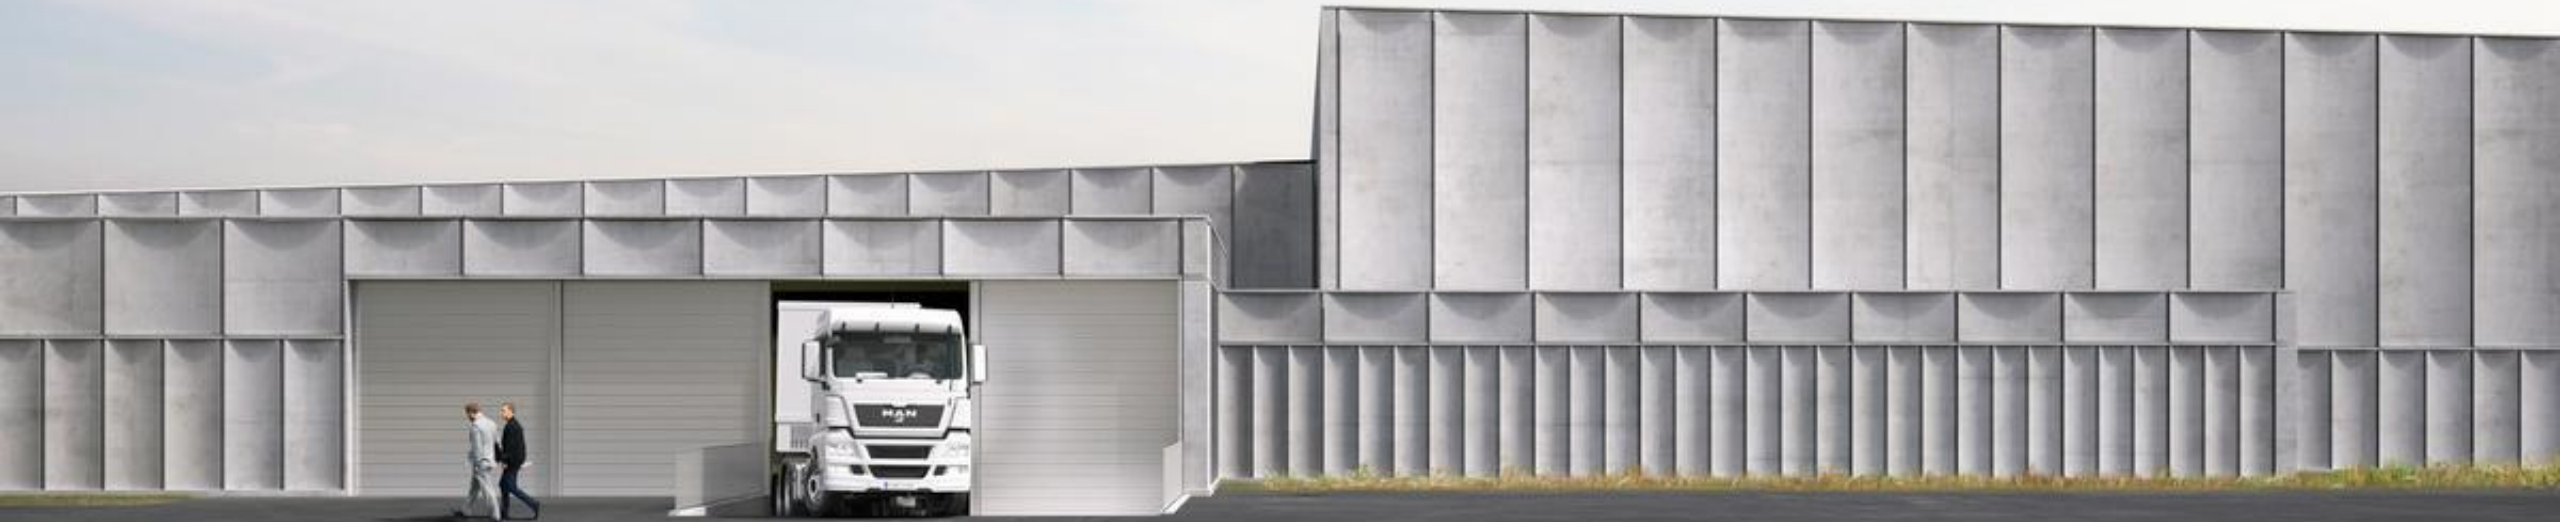

Alma was introduced in 2019

Alma was introduced in 2019, while we – in Copenhagen - were preparing the transfer of the physical collections
to a remote storage.

Remote storage facility in Vinge

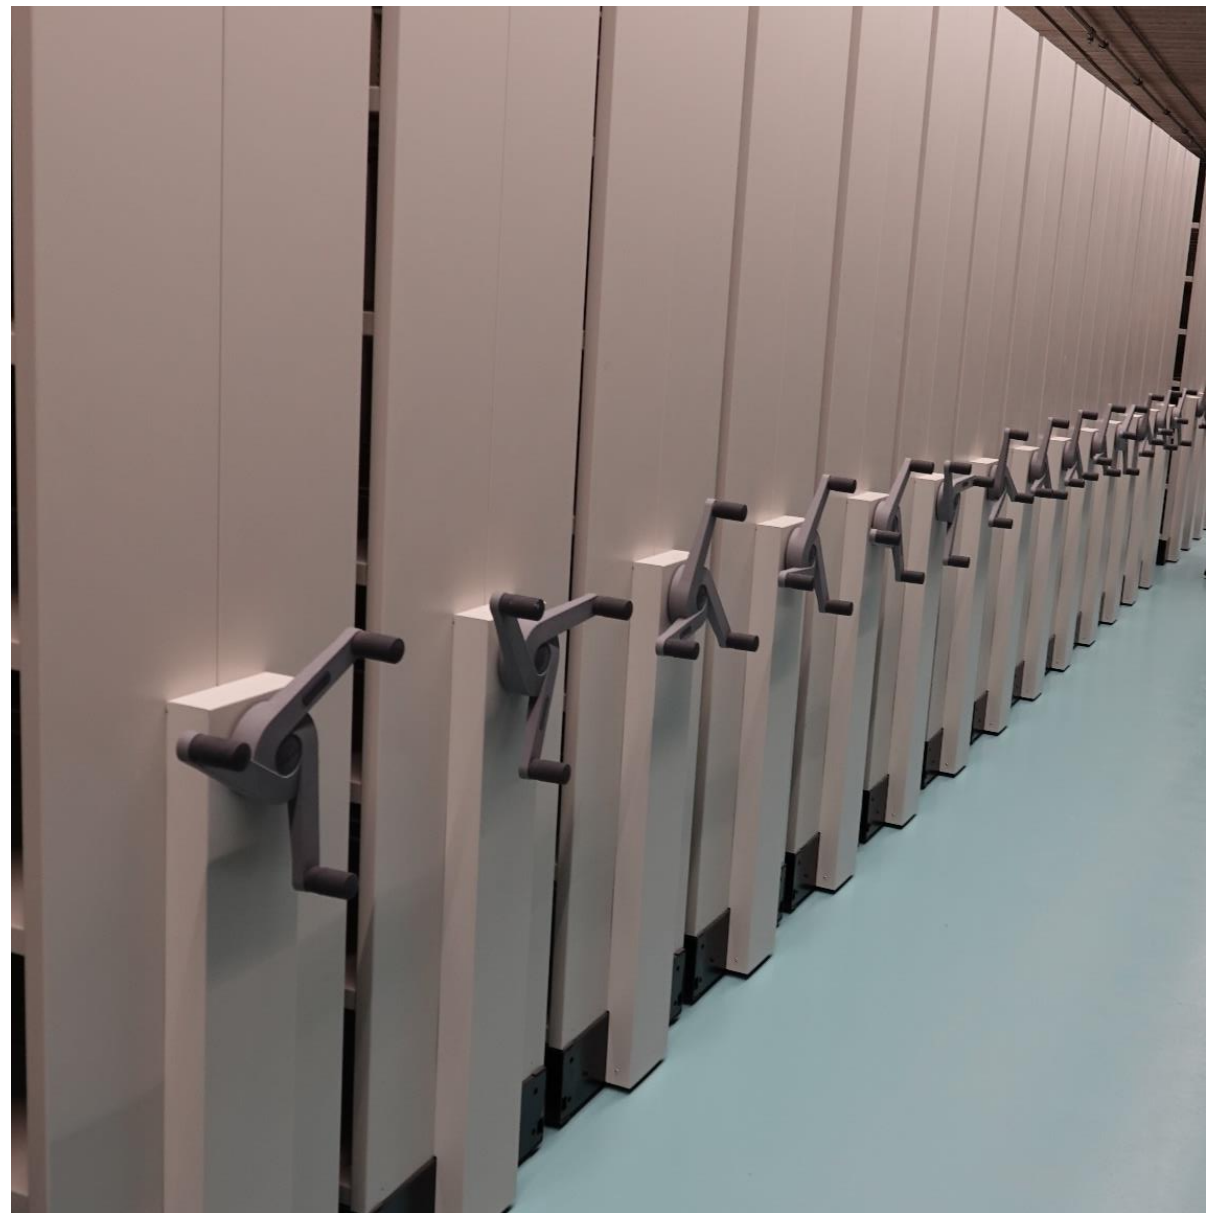

oktober 2024

47 km.s from The Black Diamond

Remote storage facility

116,000 running meters of shelves in 32 rooms equipped with low-tech mobile shelving with traditional hand cranks.

Objectives

- We want the patron to be able to request the item directly in Primo
- We want to transfer metadata from Alma to the digital files when digitizing and to use the metadata in our online publishing platform.

Semi-automatic transfer of metadata

Workflow in Libanswers

Request

for access to private archives from the Royal Danish Library's collections

DET KGL.
BIBLIOTEK
Royal Danish Library

Special rules apply for access to private archives that contain documents younger than 75 years. This is due, among other things, to the fact that the library often does not know the exact contents in detail.

Archives often contain information, which may be covered by the rules on the protection of privacy, the rules on personal data, and the rules on copyright. In addition, for some archives there may be special clauses set by the donor that limit use.

It is therefore necessary to apply for access stating a legitimate purpose. With your signature on this form, you apply for access and at the same time accept the conditions that apply, if access is granted.
