Summary

Marine life is significantly impacted by global warming and ocean acidification, leading to decreased survival, calcification, growth, and abundance in various marine organisms <sup>2</sup>. Climate change has extensive effects on China's marine ecosystems, causing changes in biodiversity, red tide bloom frequency, and habitat distribution <sup>3</sup>. An evolutionary perspective is crucial to understanding and predicting the impact of climate change on marine populations, emphasizing the need to assess the evolutionary potential of marine organisms to cope with rapid environmental changes <sup>1</sup>. The Antarctic region faces the risk of non-native marine species establishment due to ecological and environmental changes, highlighting the importance of legislation and research to prevent biological invasions <sup>4</sup>. Ocean acidification, influenced by various factors like atmospheric CO2 and nutrient runoff, poses a significant threat to marine ecosystems and organisms, amplifying the dangers of acidification on biological processes <sup>5</sup>.

Marco Polo (, Venetian: [marko 'polo], Italian: [marko 'po:lo] ; c. 1254 – 8 January 1324) was a Venetian merchant, explorer and writer who travelled through Asia along the Silk Road between 1271 and 1295. His travels are recorded in The Travels of Marco Polo (also known as Book of the Marvels of the World and Il Milione, c. 1300), a book that described to Europeans the then-mysterious culture and inner workings of the Eastern world, including the wealth and great size of the Mongol Empire and China under the Yuan dynasty, giving their first comprehensive look into China, Persia, India, Japan, and other locations throughout Asia. Born in Venice, Marco learned the mercantile trade from his father and his uncle, Niccolò and Maffeo, who travelled through Asia and met Kublai Khan. In 1269, they returned to Venice to meet Marco for the first time. The three of them embarked on an epic journey to Asia, exploring many places along the Silk Road until they reached "Cathay".
